Look upon this picture. Over one half of the white population and nine-tenths of the colored population of our State can neither read nor write. population of our State can neither read nor write. From time immemorial all the Colleges and places of learning have been in the hands of purse-proud aristociats, who have combined to keep you chained in the dungeons of ignorance. Shall this intolerable system of wrong endure forever? The very stones cry out against it! It is not the rich and powerful that are ignorant and unlearned—they alone have had all the advantages, but this dark cloud—this almost rayless night of mental gloom has fallen upon the working men of North Carolillan—only upon them and their children and their line—only upon them and their children and their children's children. Now what does this teach you? It teaches that slave labor was ruinous to you. That slave labor was protected by law, while your labor was oppressed without law, and you were nearly started upon the soil of your birth. This should stir a mu-

Libel Suits, It is at once a testimeny to the improved character of the press, and to the growth of common sense among judges and juries, that libel suits against newspapers are so much more apt to terminate in favor of defendants than they used to be thirty years age. Individuals who for the first time suffer from such a cause may very naturally imagine that the "licentiousness of the press" is growing, just as a recruit hurried into battle, and scor wounded, night naturally think that the conflict was growing flercor, when, in fact, it was rapidly dying out. But juries represent pretty fairly the average sense of the community; and it is obvious that the juries of to-day are much less prone to believe that an editor is actuated by unworthy motives than were the uries of the last generation. If it were the general belief of the community that editors were as a rule given to wanton defamation, that belief would create a predisposition among jurymen to give verdicts against them. Such an inclination used to exist among juries in old times. But no sign of it re-

The judges also treat the press very differently now from the mode to which they were formerly accustomed. Thirty years ago a judge might be depended upon to compel a conviction for life it where the jury hesitated. It is not so now! If it 59 42 be said that the change is owing to a greater servil-66 91 ity, or other dishonerable motive, on the part of the 55 72 judges, we need answer only by pointing to the no-torious character of the very few judges who are 52 04 given to denouncing the press. In old times the 52 00 most upright judges were severest in their dealings 71 82 North Carolina 49 38 bitter against it are men whom no one suspect of

We have been led into this train of thought by the result of two libel suits, which have just ended. each of them with a verdict for the defendant. The suit against The Nation was founded upon an arti-cle severely condemning the reckies and unfeeling been guilty. The plaintiff in that suit based his claim upon the fact that the description given in The Nation of the person in fault applied more nearly to him than to any one else, while it was really a subordinate of his who was to blame. There was no doubt that the defendant did not identify him as the person in fault, and that, if he had remained silent, very few persons would have applied the description to him. He preferred, how ever, to sue, and thus brought his name prominent ly before the public as the conductor of a train which was managed in a brutal manner by some one. The result was that, although he did not appear to have been the person most in fault, the jury were not satisfied that he was free from all blame, and he lost his his case and damaged his own char-

The other case, brought by Mrs. Dean (formerly Miss Boker) against the former publisher of The Sun, presented a clearer case of technical libel. The Sur copied from another paper a long story, ruinous to the character of Mrs. Dean, and entirely untrue. But the publication was made in good faith; and immediately upon its untruth being pointed out to the editor, he made as full a retraction as was possible. But Mr. Dean was not satisfied. He wanted to make money out of the transaction; and tried one lawyer after another, until he found and tried one lawyer after another, until he found one who would push the case vigorously. His counsel made an appeal to the jury, marvellously like that of Sergeant Buzfuz in the renowned case of Bardeli versus Pickwich. But alas! "chops and tomato sance" are not so powerful as they once were; ner will even an appeal to the warming-pan move the cold hearts of a Brooklyn jury. They did not believe that the action was brought in good faith, or that the plaintiff had sustained any injury faith, or that the plaintiff had sustained any injury which was not fully atoned for by the apology publicly made. Probably they were somewhat disgusted by the effort of the plaintiff's husband to make money in this way, nor can we blame them.

We do not ask, nor do we understand the press in general to ask, for release from responsibility for wayners wantenly or even regligantly committed.
